Route Map

Each year the festival of Dussehra celebrates the Hindu god Rama's victory over the demon king Ravana and the triumph of good over evil.

Primarily a Hindu festival, in the tribal regions of Chattisgarh of Eastern India however, the various tribes of the Bastar people celebrate Dessehra in memory of their Goddess 'Danteshwari Mai'

The Bastar include Gond, Bhatra, Muria, Abhuj Maria, Bison Horn Maria, Halbaa and Dhurvaa tribes and sub-tribes.

Each tribe has developed its own dialects and differs from each other in their costume, eating habits, customs, traditions and even worship different forms of their gods and goddesses. Many tribals still live in deep forests and avoid mixing with outsiders in order to protect their own unique culture.

The Bastar were the earliest people to work with metal and have expertise in making beautiful figurines of tribal gods, votive animals, oil lamps, carts and animals.

We then visit Kanha National Park in search of Royal Bengal Tiger before returning to Delhi.

Temples, Tribes & Tigers of Eastern India

Jama Masjid mosque, Old Delhi

Our journey begins with the Air India direct daylight flight from Sydney to Delhi, arriving in the early evening for two nights at the iconic Taj Mahal Hotel.

We take a full day tour of Old and New Delhi, visiting historic sites including the Jama Masjid Mosque, enjoy a stimulating cycle rickshaw ride through the markets and lanes of Chandni Chowk (Moonlight Square), view the Red Fort, Raj Ghat (cremation site of Mahatma Gandhi) and drive past Feroz Shah Kotla. In New Delhi we visit Qutab Minar, Humayun's Tomb, and drive via India Gate and Raj Path to Rashtrapati Bhavan to see the offices of Parliament, Secretariat and the Diplomatic Enclave.

We fly to Bhubaneswar, capital of the state of Odisha (formerly Orissa) and visit the Museum of Tribal Arts and Artefacts with its exhibits of dresses and ornaments, hunting and agricultural implements, weapons, photographs and arts of Odishan tribes.

Bhubaneswar is known as the Temple City of India. The region encompassing the present state of Odisha was originally known as Kaling and 'Kalingan architecture' is reflected in the hundreds of temples remaining (of the many thousands constructed) from the 6th - 11th Century AD 'golden era'. We take a walk through the heritage listed temple area and visit the 2nd Century BC Khandagiri & Udaygiri Jain cave complexes. We stay for two nights at the Mayfair Lagoon Hotel.

Mukteswar Temple, Bhubaneswar

Leaving Bhubaneswar, we pause at Balakati, a village famous for making brass metal pots, then at nearby Hirapur explore the complex of 64 Yogini temples dating from the 9th Century, where tantric (black magic) rites were practiced in seclusion.

Approaching the Bay of Bengal shoreline we visit the incredible Sun Temple of Konark. Built by Kalingan King Narasimha Dev II in the 13th Century to resemble a giant chariot, the 'black pagoda' is the only temple in India dedicated to the rising sun, and the only World Heritage monument in Eastern India.

Jagganath Temple, Puri

Continuing to Puri, we proceed to the huge temple dedicated to Lord Jagannath, which we view from the outside as it is closed to non-Hindus. Each afternoon the flags are changed at the top of the 65 meter temple, with devotees scaling the outside of the spires. We stay overnight at the Mayfair Waves Resort.

The next day we traverse the northern shores of beautiful Chilka Lake, stopping briefly at the ikat weaving village of Olasingh, and for a migratory bird watching lake cruise by local boats at the village of Mangalajodi. We stay overnight at the Mayfair Palm Beach Resort in Gopalpur.

Sun Temple, Konark

From the flat coastal plains we traverse the Eastern Ghats (mountains) into the forested highlands of south central Odisha - the 'land of tribes'. In the lands of the Kutia ('tattoo-faced') Kondh we encounter a primitive tribal group famous for their traditional life style and 'meria' (human) sacrifice, thankfully abolished and now replaced by buffalo sacrifices for important agricultural festivities and ceremonies. We stay overnight at the Bivab Hotel in Baliguda.

Heading south we pass through Kotgarh Elephant Reserve to Chatikona to visit the Wednesday market populated by Dongaria (a Kondh sub-group) who carry their agricultural goods down from villages in the nearby Niyamgiri Hills to trade at the market. In the afternoon we proceed to Chandoori Sai for a stay of four nights at the pleasant Chandoori Sai Guest House.

The following day (Thursday) is the weekly market at nearby Onukadeli village and people of the Bonda (one of the most primitive tribes of the region), Gadaba and Didayi tribes walk up to 20km to reach this market. In addition to local produce, the market has an area dedicated to selling 'salap' (a traditional alcoholic drink made from the saga palm), 'toddy' (made from date palm) and 'mahuli' (made from the mahua flower).

Temples, Tribes & Tigers of Eastern India

Kutia (tattoo-faced) Kondh girl

Friday is the traditional day for the weekly Kunduli market, an important livestock market and the largest tribal market in Odisha. We will primarily see people from the Paroja, Gadaba and Mali tribes, with the chance of meeting people from many other tribal groups. The market runs for most of the day and we will stroll the village streets and perhaps witness a Demsha tribal dance, with people of all ages participating in this traditional performance.

A typical day in a tribal village starts early, and on Saturday we have the opportunity to observe traditional family activities as we wander through the narrow lanes and along meandering village paths. We also visit Laxmipur where the small market is set in a pretty mango garden.

Bastar tribal girls, Chattisgarh

The next day we leave Chandoori Sai and drive to Kotpad, a village renowned for its cotton and silk weaving using natural dyes. Fabrics depicting animals, trees and different human figures taken from traditional paintings are sold at the market. We cross the state border and continue to Jagadalpur in Chattisgarh where, adjacent to the palace, we visit the tribal market that still occurs every Sunday - even though the town has grown significantly in recent years. We stay four nights at the Bastar Jungle Resort.

We visit one of the many scattered villages of the Bison-horn Maria tribe, where the walls and roofs of the older family homes are made using flat stone slabs found in this region. Many village folk, dressed in their traditional attire, will have left to walk to Jagadalpur to attend the Dussehra festival (which starts the next day). We visit Tokapal village for the weekly Monday market of the Bison-horn Maria tribe and, if time permits, continue to see Chitrakote Falls, known locally as the "Niagara of India".

Bison-horn Maria tribe drummers

The next day (Tuesday, 8th October) is the first day of Dussehra. Each year across India the festival celebrates the Hindu god Rama's victory over the demon king Ravana and the triumph of good over evil. Primarily a Hindu festival, in the tribal regions of Chattisgarh however, the various tribes of the Bastar people celebrate Bastar Dussehra in memory of their goddess 'Danteshwari Mai', who is the revered deity of all the tribes of Chhattisgarh.

Royal palanquin, Bastar Dussehra festival

It is believed that Maharaja Purushaottam Deo initiated the Bastar Dussehra festival early in the 15th Century. The festival is attended by people from all the major tribes of the Bastar region, which includes the Gond, Abhuj Maria, Bhatra, Halva, Dhurua, Muria and Bison-horn Maria. The Gonds are the largest tribe in India, known for their unique Ghotul system of marriage.

Each tribal group has their own distinct culture and follow their own unique traditional living styles. Each has developed its own dialect and differs from each other in their costume, eating habits, customs, traditions, and even worship different forms of their gods and goddesses.

Many still live in deep forests and avoid mixing with outsiders to protect their culture. Tribes are known for their colorful festivals, arts & crafts, and were amongst the earliest to work with metal, making beautiful figurines of tribal gods, votive animals, lamps, carts & animals.

During the following ten days the respected Royal family of Bastar arranges worship sessions in which the ancient arms of the Goddess Danteshwari are treated as divine elements.

Bastar metalwork statuary

One of the inherent traits of the Bastar Dussehra is that the control of the state is formally transferred to the Diwan (chief officer, equivalent of finance minister) keeping the Zamindar (autocrat, land owner) and similar important personages as witnesses.

Kunwaramavasya is the first day of Dussehra, when the customary transfer of control takes place. A mystical characteristic of this ceremony is that before handing over the power to the Diwan, a girl who is believed to be possessed by spiritual powers is asked for permission. This girl is seen with a wooden sword and stands in a war-like posture.

The second day is called Pratipada which is followed by religious aarti (offering of light) and salami (offering of gift) ceremonies. We will visit the Tribal Museum and in the afternoon watch the chariot festival, when tribal groups 'return' the chariot and goddess Danteshwari Mai to the temple, having 'stolen' it from the palace the previous day.

Gond girls

'stealing the chariot', Bastar Dussehra festival

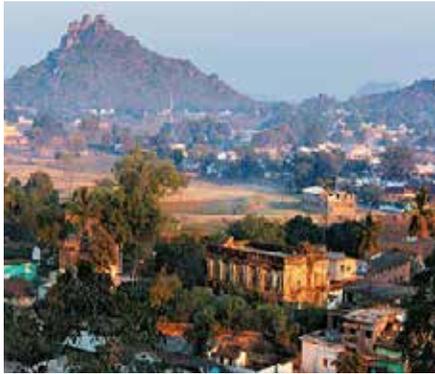

Leaving Jagdalpur we drive to Kanker, a former princely state. Enroute we stop at several villages famous for their various crafts such as iron, brass and metal work, particularly traditional 'dohra' (brass metal statuary), jute and cotton textiles, wood carving and terracotta pottery.

We also visit the Thursday market at Bahigaon before reaching Kanker. Though now part of Chattisgarh state, the royal family of Kanker is the symbolic head of the tribes of this particular region. We stay two nights at Kanker Palace Heritage Hotel.

The next day we visit a village of the 'Deer-horn Maria' tribe, a sub-group of Gond who, like the 'Bison-horn Maria' tribe, incorporate animal horns in their head gear.

Less common today, the tribe traditionally followed 'Ghotul' - a system of 'free sex' where each evening young men and women dance and sing ceremonial songs with their temporary partner for the night.

Temples, Tribes & Tigers of Eastern India

Kanker district

In case of illness and maladies they seek the remedial powers of 'mahuli' (liquor made from the Mahua plant). We also visit the Friday market at Bade Dongar where Gond and Bhatra tribes barter their goods.

From Kanker we drive north through the Chilpa Hills straddling the state border between Chattisgarh and Madhya Pradesh. Entering Kanha National Park we stay for three nights at Banjar Tola, a luxury jungle lodge operated by the Taj group.

The lodge is situated along the banks of the Banjar River overlooking the heart of Kanha National Park, nestled amid 90 acres of private Sal forest interspersed with grasslands and a seasonal lake..

There are two intimate camps of nine tents, each with its own pool, outdoor as well as indoor lounge options and interactive dining areas. Bastar bell metal work, Gond artwork and intricate stone carvings adorn the guest areas and showcase the rich cultural heritage of the region.

Barasingha, Kanha National Park

During our stay we undertake morning and afternoon jeep safaris, nature walks along easy jungle trails and visit nearby villages.

This region used to be a part of 'Gondwana', or land of the Gond tribe which still inhabit the region. The Baiga are the other prominent tribe living here.

Kanha National Park straddles the districts of Mandla and Balaghat, a region which has enjoyed protection since 1879 as a reserve forest, declared a National park in 1955 and then a Tiger Reserve in 1973.

Located on the Maikal Hills of the Satpura range; Kanha constitutes the classic landscape of the Central Indian highlands with gently sloping hills, misty dense forests and river valleys. Kanha is one of the largest parks in India, spreading over 2000 square kilometres.

The jungle is prime tiger habitat and a conservation success for Barasingha (hard ground swamp deer) named for the multiple tines of its antler - barah is 12 in Hindi.

Other wildlife includes predators like Leopard, Jungle Cat, Indian Fox, Wild Dog and Jackal. Sloth bears are seen often, as are sounders of wild pigs, Chital (spotted deer), Sambar, Muntjac (barking deer) and healthy populations of black faced grey langur and red faced rhesus macaque. Herds of Gaur or Indian bison, the largest wild cattle in the world, can be spotted in good numbers. Flying foxes and flying squirrels can be seen at dusk. The various water bodies attract migratory birds to the park, taking the bird count to over 315.

Leaving Kanha we drive to Raipur for the afternoon flight back to New Delhi and our final two nights at the Taj Mahal Hotel, with a further full day of sightseeing.

Our journey home is on the afternoon Air India direct service to Sydney, arriving early the next morning.
